Debbie was born in Trenton, NJ, but moved to Atlanta at the age of five when her father was transferred with JC Penney. She is from a large Italian, Catholic family and says they are exactly like you see on TV. Debbie met her husband, Greg, in her church's singles group and now has two boys ages 13 and 10 and a house full of animals (Golden Retrievers, cats, a turtle, and a parrot—all rescue animals)! Her family loves living close to the North Georgia Mountains because so much of the beautiful area is still untouched by progress.

Debbie has worked part-time for the past ten years as a pre-K teacher at her local church preschool. She loves going to work every day and seeing all the children's smiling faces.

After work, Debbie keeps busy playing Mom, running a household, and running her boys around to their various activities. In her free time, she can be found sitting at the computer blogging, searching for deals, or social networking with friends. In addition, Debbie is an avid photographer and spends lots of time taking and posting pictures.

A Day Late and a Dollar Short is Debbie's money saving blog. In addition to coupons, special deals, drug store match-ups, and freebies, Debbie throws in some personal information about her family or one of her other passions, all things Disney.

If we could give Debbie "One less thing to worry about," she would request a helper to manage all the research and details of running a home and saving money. (That sounds like more than "one thing" but Allconnect can help with Home Services.)
