Allconnect Welcomes Governor of Kentucky at Opening of Lexington Sales & Customer Care Center

LEXINGTON, Ky. (July 11, 2011) – Allconnect CEO Mark Miller welcomed Gov. Steve Beshear and other community leaders at the opening of the company's new in-bound sales and customer care center in Lexington. The project represents a nearly $7 million investment and approximately 220 new jobs for Lexington.

"The opening of Allconnect's new Lexington facility represents hundreds of new job opportunities for central Kentuckians and a strong partnership between state and local government and the private sector," said Gov. Beshear.

The Lexington Allconnect operation will allow consumers to order or transfer home services, such as satellite and cable TV, Internet, phone, and home security service. Allconnect is based in Atlanta, Ga., and has relationships with a variety of service providers across the country, including AT&T, Comcast, DIRECTV, DISH Network, Time Warner Cable, and Verizon.

"Allconnect's employees approach every customer interaction as an opportunity to create a service experience second to none," said Mark Miller, Allconnect CEO. "We approach our employees' experience and our role in the community the same way. We are thrilled to be a part of the Lexington community and appreciate everyone making us feel welcome."

Also attending the event were Lexington Mayor Jim Gray; Bob Quick, president & CEO, Commerce Lexington Inc.; and Rep. Jesse Crenshaw of Lexington.

Celebrating the opening of Allconnect's new sales and customer care center in Lexington are Bob Quick, president & CEO, Commerce Lexington Inc., Lexington Mayor Jim Gray, Allconnect CEO Mark Miller, Kentucky Governor Steve Beshear, and Allconnect General Manager Jim Rasnick.
